

DAVID BLAMEY

David Blamey (b. London, 1961) is a London-based artist and proprietor of the independent publishing imprint Open Editions. His work encompasses several activities, including teaching, publishing and exhibiting, which overlap to form a multidimensional practice that defies easy categorisation. To this end, his work is positioned consciously within a range of public situations, both inside and beyond the art gallery. He recently released and edited the book Specialism (2016) and a record Rural (2015), while The Wire described his O.K. sound project for My Dance the Skull's Voice Studies series as "something quite strange, creepy and good".

The respective photographers and artists reserve the rights to the images published from pages 61-72 in this issue. They may not be reproduced and distributed without permission of the photographers.

Page 61. Maud Taber-Thomas. Photograph by Xueli Zheng. www.maudtaber-thomas.com

Page 62. Paula Billups, Copying at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York 2004. Photograph by Scott Billups. <http://paulabillupsart.blogspot.se/2013/08/the-mud-in-middle.html>

Page 63. Amy Mann painting at the National Gallery of Art in Washington DC, USA. Photograph courtesy of Amy Mann. www.amyilenemann.blogspot.se

Page 64. Copying Monet (West Wing), National Gallery of Art, in Washington DC, USA. Photograph by Robin Taylor. www.flickr.com/photos/robinelaine/

Page 65. The Old Master, Louvre Photograph by Scott Watton. www.flickr.com/photos/nuzululand/

Page 66. Art Student at Hermitage. Photograph courtesy of Why Art? www.whyart.pl

Page 67. Artist copying a painting at the Louvre museum in Paris, France. Photograph by Iain Masterton. www.iainmasterton.com/index

Page 68. Copying the Old Masters, Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York. Photograph by James Stave. www.flickr.com/photos/56923898@N02/

Page 69 – Top. Artist copying old master oil painting in the Museo del Prado, Madrid, Spain. Photograph by Alex Segre. www.flickr.com/photos/alexsegre/

Page 69 – Bottom. Leo Neufeld, Copying Rembrandt. Photograph courtesy of Leo Neufeld. www.leoneufeld.com

Page 70. Ng Woo Lam, Copying master painting (Frans Hals) at the Metropolitan Museum. Photograph courtesy of Ng Woo Lam. www.woonartworks.blogspot.se

Page 71. Copy Cat Photograph by Shari Littman. www.flickr.com/photos/sharilyx/

Page 72. Artist copying The Wine Harvest by Francisco de Goya in the Museo del Prado, Madrid, Spain. Photograph by Alex Segre. www.flickr.com/photos/alexsegre/